In thirteen of these cases the contracting parties were at Bowden, twelve inlies from here, and the imagistrate performing the ceremony was at this place. In the other cases the contracting parties were at points in this county west of Bowden, from, seventeen to twenty miles distant from the magistrate. Hon, J. P. The contracting parties are in nearly every case people who live in Alabama, who cross the line into Georgia to evade making the bond for the maintenance of the wife, which is required by the laws of Alabama. Others prefer this method account of the novelty of it.

The long distance line between here and Bowden is sometimes spoken of as the "matrimonial line." In these cases the telephone people require the parties contracting to deposit the money for the icense with the agent at the place where the parties are, and the agent at this end procures the licente.

April 7.—Many men, prominent in the field of social and political economy, are attending the ninth annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Economy, which began here to-day. The general theme under discussion is "The United Sites as a World Power." The annual address, which is the feature of the meeting, was made to-night by Seth Low, former mayor of New York, who took for his subject. "The Position of the United Sites Amongst the Nations." The president's address by Professor Leo S. Rowe, of the University of Pennsylvania, was also delivered to-night. In the course of his speech, Mr. Jow said:

"If, then, it be true that the future belongs to the United Sitates, it is fortunate for mankind that the United Sitates is not in essence a warlike nation. Both list political system and its essential spirit are friendly to peace. Because its international interests are so largely commercial, its influence everywhere must be for peace and not of war. The United Sitates, nowever, has been, and is, and may hope to remain, an immense force among the nations of the earth, making for individual freedom, larger civil rights, and freedom of opportunity. No one begins to understand America who does not appreciate its earnestness and its idealism. The old Puritan doctrine may have been modified, but the Puritan spirit still remains. In a thousand ways, it affects and permeates the great mass of new-conners, almost unawares. It is a spirit to which men are of isore moment than things; before which have the decided many of the country as a world-power, may be made the process of a nation who have a supplied by the fire action of the largest body of free men on the face of the globe. Many Railroad Traffic Officials and Manufacturers Attend Banquet.

PITTSBURG, PA., April 7.—For the first time in the history of the Traffic League ably represented to-night in the greatest onunge originating point in the world. The ccasion was the third annual banque of the Traffic Club, of Pittsburg, at the Hotel Schenly. Samuel Spencer, presilent of the Southern Rallway, spoke for the railroads; Willis L. King, vice-presilent of the Jones and Laughlin's Comrany, Pittsburg, presented the interests of the manufacturers, and Judge Peter S Grosscup, of the United States Circuit Court, Chicago, upheld the rights of the Court, Chicago, upheld the rights of the people.

There were 475 railroad traffic officials and Pittsburg manufacturers around the board. The verdict of those present was that the discussions were more exhaustive and comprehensive than at any previous meeting. When the speaker began, Willis L. King, vice-president of the Jones and Laughlin's Company, was called to speak for Pittsburg and her manufacturers.

Judge Grosscup Speaks.

Mr. King was followed by Judge Grosscup, of Chicago, who spoke as follows: Grosscup Speaks.

Speaking to the toast, "The Regeneration of the Corporation, "Judge Grosscup said in part:

"We are now well into the afteenth year since the American people started out, through the Sherman act, and the several State anti-trust acts to destroy the so-called trusts. Are they destroyed? Are they deminished? Has any one of them, except from causes arising within itself, been destroyed or diminished? Trust it is that some of them have been blitted and reined until they are again in the linghways of the law. Some of them have ountarily come back to the highways of the law. Some have never departly from these highways. Some are still at large. But none that I can recall have been destroyed; none have succumbed to the full length of purpose with which; as a people, we started out to annihilate them. Whatever has been the success of our policy of measurable control, the policy of annihilation has proved a failure—a flat sheer failure.

"I know of one corporation that organized recently inder the laws of New Jersey with an authorized capital of forty million dollars. For some reason this must have looked high, even to the promoters, for only ten million were issued. After a little while these ten million scruple of the stockholders, or some business expedient, I do not know. All I do know is that a little while after that the corporation planded in bankruptey thousand dollars, presumably acquired on the credit of the corporation after its organization, for the current liabilities on the redit of the corporation after the borders is the University of Princeton, a foundain of learning and morals that reaches every corner of our country. But with all that, could there be conceived a case, of the people of a Commonwealth in such a case of the people of a Commonwealth in such a case from the moral consequence of having issued a false and fraudulent each of the corporations, and deposits essentially are a form of investment, the banks are corporations, and deposits essentially are a form of investment, where power will be in

The Regeneration.

"But you ask me, How can the course of things as they are now going be changed. How can the individual man be brought back into proprietorship? My answer is: Take the corporation at once and forever out of the list of suspects. Put the corporation, as national banks, and trust companies are now put, under the supervision apt control of law, to the end that it coulses a faithful steward. Make it, for instance, impossible for the promotors of the street rallway, the case I have mentioned, to have diverted from replenishment the earnings that under any honest administration ought to have gone to replenishment. That would have been no stretch of supervision beyond what is exercised now in the case of banks, insurance companies and savings societies; and it would have saved the investor in these street rallway securities from the linancial morass into which he was led, and the public any cause for justifiable indignation.

The Real Difficulty.

The Real Difficulty.

"The difficulties of adjustment, therefore, lie not, as has been so often claimed, in any obstructive or defant attitude of the railway manager. They rest fundamentally in the anomalous condition in which the carriers are placed under the law; in those suggestions of remedy which, failing atterly to reach the evils sought to be cured, would punish unwisely and unnecessarily the innocent along with the guilty; and in those suggestions which look to the separation of one particular class of property from all others, to be dealt with invidiously by special tribunal and by special methods.

"It is not reasonable regulation to which the carriers object, it is to unwise and unfair regulation. It is not regulation which seeks directly to remedy known and tangible ovils, but it is the so-called regulation which, while ostensibly attacking one will or class of evils, inflicts unknown and which seeks directly to remedy known and the subject of the second of the property of the subject of the second of the carriers, and impedent of the property of the subject of the subject of the resulting of the subject of the subject of the subject of the subject of the resulting of the subject of the sub

"The Joseph Bill provides that a rate once syed by the commission should continue in force indefinitely, unless changed by the commission or by the court. Under such law all rates would in time, become commission's rates, and the functions of ratiway managers in adjusting rates to mest commercial conditions, and in extending the sphere of usefulness of the transportation system of the country, would step by step come to an end. Slow, but steady, paralysis would creep into the industrial arteries through which the blood of commerce flows, and the transportation system would gradually become dumb and sigid. The trosent activities of railway managers would be eliminated as an ascery to the intelligent development of the resources of the country. Rates would soon be machine-made only, and commercial and industrial centers, now are distribution of their produce would and themselves operating in acrower and narrower zones, finally circumscribed by governmental selfs as to where their wares should go.

"Bring under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, and the jurisdiction of the commission, those water lines which are engaged in interstate commerce in connection or in conjunction with the railways; place such restrictions with the railways; place such restrictions with the railways; place such restrictions upon the interstate traffic passing partly through foreign countries as will complete compliance with all the laws and regulations which apply to that moving soletwithin United States boundaries; spread the maulic of the law and of the commission over the fast freight and private car lines doing interstate commerce, and institute, if needs be, such regulations in respect to industrial tracks and phantom railways as shall prevent such allowances to them as may breed insidious evasions of the law.
